Case called. Counsel stated their appearances. The Court heard argument on Plaintiffs' Motion for Document Production.

For the reasons explained on the record:

1. The Court denied without prejudice Plaintiffs' Motion for Document Production.
2. The Court ordered Plaintiffs, by not later than November 9, 2023, to (a) review the dockets of the approximately forty (40) so-called "Family Separation Cases" (see Docket No. 64 at n.3); (b) identify any discovery orders requiring/declining to require the production of non-plaintiff specific discovery beyond the "common discovery," as that term has been defined by Defendant; (c) prepare a chart/list including the case name/number of each such case, the docket number of any such order (or an indication of "none"), and a description of any such discovery referenced in any such order; and (d) file and serve Defendant with a copy of such chart/list;
3. The Court ordered Defendant, by not later than November 17, 2023, to (a) seek from other federal government attorneys assigned to the approximately forty (40) so-called "Family Separation Cases," information regarding what, if any, non-plaintiff specific discovery beyond the "common discovery," as that term has been defined by Defendant, has been produced – voluntarily or otherwise – in such cases; (b) prepare a chart/list

<sup>1</sup>While the Court directed Defendant's counsel to make good faith efforts to seek the information in issue (e.g., through an email directed to the federal government attorneys assigned to the other so-called "Family Separation Cases"), it noted that if Defendant's counsel was unsuccessful in timely obtaining the information in one or more such cases, it should note on its chart/list that the information has been requested but not received.
